MALE POEM

Tillie Tisch is a gorgeous damsel,
With golden hair and a regal carriage.
I'm worried though — for while her lips say
"Kiss me"—her eyes say "Marriage".

MALE JEWELRY

All the best-dressed lads in town are going in for those new Swank watch guards. These guards are done in leather and metal, some of them featuring sporting crystals with dog and horse heads. It's an ancient custom going back to the days when Grandpa was a pup and bicycles were built for two, and ladies still blushed. You wear them in your lapel and slip the attached watch into the breast pocket. $1 and up.

LONELY HEART

There's a lonely guy in town who thinks he has solved his problem. He writes burning love letters, puts them in envelopes addressed to "Whom It May Concern" and leaves them on bus seats. So far he has distributed 18 letters thusly. The returns are very encouraging. Already he has received seven replies—two from Used Car dealers—one from an insurance salesman offering to sell him an accident policy—and three from summer hotels describing

ARMY'S FAREWELL GIVEN TO PILSUDSKI

Marshal's Body Sent on Way to Cracow After Parade of Troops and Envoys.

PEASANTS LINE RAIL ROUTE

Hold Candles and Torches and Pray While the Funeral Train Passes By.

By FREDERICK T. BIRCHALL.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
WARSAW, May 17.—Amid the most impressive pageantry Central Europe has witnessed since President Paul von Hindenburg of Germany was laid to rest at Tannenberg, Poland sent her military hero, Marshal Josef Pilsudski, from his nation's capital today to his last resting place in Cracow.

The army of his creation brought him to Warsaw's gateway and there marched past him in a solemn farewell.

Tonight he is being carried through the countryside, and for 200 miles his train is passing between almost solid lines of peasantry, with greater gatherings at little railway stations, at which the train slows down or halts for a moment so that a prayer may be said. This last passing of Poland's Marshal and kindly dictator will be a legend through that countryside for years.

Poor Peasants Bear Torches.

These peasants, most of them poor beyond any reckoning of American farmers, stand side by side on each side of the tracks, the better off holding lighted candles and the poorer bearing torches of branches and rags dipped in grease. Many women kneel as the train approaches and finger a rosary.

Some throw little green branches on the railroad as if to make the path of the train softer and sweet-smelling. Sometimes the lines are double or more. Everywhere on distant roads that can be seen from the train are more lights and kneeling figures behind them.

All that they see is a slow-moving train, comprising a locomotive and four dark carriages, in which are the Marshal's immediate family and friends and a very few of the highest officials of the army and State, and midway between these carriages an open truck on which Marshal Pilsudski's body is borne.

It is a flat car of an ordinary type, except that it is new and its sides are painted in the black and blue colors of the Polish Military Cross. Upon it stands a gun carriage to which a light frame has been attached above the gun. On the frame rests the Marshal's oak coffin, which will give place to a new one of glass and silver at Cracow.

A great hall of oak and white covers it and upon this rests the Marshal's cap, his sword and his baton. A guard of honor of six officers with drawn swords stands motionless in each side and streets. More people also witnessed it, for along the three-mile route there were assembled more than 500,000 persons.

In the crowd there was an accident, a ladder falling from a roof and starting a panic in which shop windows were smashed. The procession was broken and halted until officers with drawn swords formed a cordon, enabling it to proceed to the final scene.

This was at Mokotow aviation field, where the army had been reviewed annually by the Marshal. Arriving there, the flag-draped coffin was carried to a high bank, which had been his reviewing stand and from which today an improvised railway track led back to the waiting special train which later was to carry him away.

Another gun carriage stood on the mound. The coffin was carried to it. The nation's wreaths were spread on each side and the clergy and foreign envoys grouped themselves along the flanks.

March Past Begins.

Gray-clad veterans of the old Pilsudski legions in a band spread the mound and the Polish populace in the thousands filled the greater part of the field. Above circled four squadrons of army airplanes flying in formation. In this setting the march past began amid a silence broken only by the drone of the airplanes and the muffled roll of massed drums across the field.

The regiments marched up and passed eyes right to the shrouded coffin on the grass-covered bank. The drums were sounded and raised again, swords came to a salute, but the passing feet upon the green turf made no sound. An occasionaluffled soc from the great RIGA, Latvia, May 17.—After sitting since Monday the Lithuanian Supreme Court at Kaunas upon an appeal of the death sentences recently imposed on four Memelanders for high treason. A prison sentence of 10 years that of Baron von der Rosen was reduced from eight to six years. Details of the damage claims were added.

Although appeals were allowed only on points of law, the appointments of the court were strong cause for the protest. The procedure of the court was also criticized. The court had evoked disapproval because Lithuania's well-wishers who expected a conciliatory move toward composing the Memel dispute. The death sentences may now be carried out at any time unless stayed or appeal to the President. It is virtually certain, however, that appeals will not be admitted by the Lithuanian government. clared that it had been used exclusively to finance St. Vincent Hospital in Cologne and that the funds smuggled across the frontiers were to have been used for interest service and part liquidation of the loans.

Asked why she had not applied to the duly appointed German authorities for permission to effect such transfers, she replied: "Because it would not have been granted to us."

When the court asked whether she believed that she had acted lawfully in the matter, the nun, with her eyes lowered, whispered: "Of course it was not right."

The trial continued throughout the greater part of the day and the five-year penitentiary term and fine were finally imposed for "continuous premeditated violation of the exchange regulations." The court also ordered the confiscation of 250,000 marks of the Vincentian Order's funds, which, it is learned, will be paid by the German League of Catholic Charities.

Testimony introduced at the trial revealed that the mother superior of the order had instructed the nuns now held in Moabit jail to discard their religious garb during their incarceration in order to conserve "the sacredness and dignity" of the order, which was not responsible for the offense. The nuns were further advised to "comfort themselves, for Christ too had to divest Himself of His garments." This provoked the court to observe that if such a spirit dominated the order it was little wonder that its members were led astray.

Smuggling Well Organized.

Evidence introduced by the State today indicated that the process of smuggling funds from Germany through devious ways was not only well organized but that such funds had found their way into The Netherlands and Belgium through the connivance of members of the order in those countries who acted as frontier couriers. The money, it was alleged, was usually concealed in the religious garb of the nuns and friars engaged in the operations.

The prosecution remarked that the payment of debts abroad by German nationals constituted an immoral procedure if the personal economy was menaced thereby, and that, while the exchange defense laws violated in the present instance, had been decreed by the Bruening government, "a certain subterranean morality had developed since 1933 which sought to encourage this practice." The National Socialist State, it was announced, was determined to put an end to it.

No date has been set for the trials of the more than two score other members of Catholic orders. It has also been impossible to obtain a list of those awaiting trial or specific information concerning their offenses. The cases involving higher members of the clergy, it was reported, will be heard some time in the summer.

Most of the convents and orders involved in the case are in the Rhineland and Westphalia, although house searches and arrests have also been made in Bavaria, Saxony

Lack of Faith in Nazis Laid to Magdeburg Folk

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES. BERLIN, May 17.—The Magdeburg Police Chief has issued a public reprimand to citizens for lack of confidence in local authorities and for willingness to hear criticism.

According to his statement, far too many complaints regarding wholly harmless matters are now made anonymously. He calls particular attention to instances in which individuals signing themselves "Old Nazi Member" did not have the courage to give their real names or addresses.

It would appear that citizens of Magdeburg have come to the conclusion that discretion is the better part of valor when dealing with the present government.

BRAZIL'S PRESIDENT SAILS FOR ARGENTINA

Vargas, Returning Visit of Jasto, Escorted by Fleet Bound for Winter Manoeuvres.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES. RIO DE JANEIRO, May 17.—President Getulio Vargas called this afternoon on the battleship Sao Paulo for Buenos Aires to return the visit President Agustin P. Justo of Argentina made to Brazil a year ago. He was accompanied by Senhora Vargas and their daughter and by members of his military and naval staffs.

Argentina has planned an elaborate welcome for Senhor Vargas, including a military parade in which Brazilian sailors and marines will march. On May 26 Presidents Vargas and Justo will attend the opening session of the Pan-American Commercial Conference. It is also hoped they may sign a commercial treaty and inaugurate the Chaco peace conference.

The President has a personal guard of a battalion each of military and naval cadets. His ship was escorted by the cruisers Bahia and Rio Grande do Sul, heading the Brazilian fleet, bound for Ilha Grande for Winter manoeuvres with a personnel of 3,000 officers and men.

U. S. MOVE PLEAS GENEVA LABOR GROUP

Our First Fall Delegation to World Conference Will Be Welcomed at Parley.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES. GENEVA, May 17.—Much satisfaction is expressed in international labor circles that the United States will be represented by a complete delegation to the annual International Labor Conference, beginning June 4. There is much regret, however, that the continuance of Congress prevents both Secretary Perkins and William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, from coming as they had planned.

This will be the first time the United States has had a complete voting delegation of four—a government having two votes and employers and workers each one. The size of the United States delegation—fourteen, including advisers—compares well with other countries.

Miss Edith Abbott's position as head of the delegation is thought here to mean the United States Government is particularly interested in the question of remedying unemployment for the young. This is usually ranked after the question of establishing an internationally shorter week in certain industries as the chief among the six problems on the conference's agenda.

Miss Abbott is known in Geneva where she has represented the United States several times on the League's child welfare committee. Henry S. Dennison also is well known here. His debut as the employers' delegate at the governing body's April session made so strong an impression that his return is widely welcomed.

the executions must take place within twenty-four hours, unless the man were saved by the President of Lithuania. The consulate was surrounded by a heavy police guard which prevented disorder by the crowd.

No reports of demonstrations in other parts of the Reich were received. The feeling of indifference toward the virtually unknown Memel territory prevailing in the rest of the Reich is hard for East Prussians to understand, although it was made evident by the half-hearted protest of the rest of Germany when the death sentences were imposed.

Berlin Sees Russia's Hand.

BERLIN, May 17 (AP).—The decision of the Lithuanian Supreme Court upholding the death sentences against four Memel Germans was called by Nazi officials here tonight a hidden Bolshevik stab at Germany, "perhaps even with the intention of provoking Germany into aggressive action."

The approval of the death sentences came as a blow to Berlin, but the Foreign Office said a protest was unlikely. Hopes were expressed that Great Britain would take action to save the men.

Nazi officials from Reichstag speaker Adolf Hitler down, are commonly credited with being convinced that the Soviet would like to strike at the Third Reich and that Russia is behind Lithuanian affirmance of the death sentences.

The new Franco-German and Russo-Lithuanian mutual assistance pact are causing great alarm in Germany. Officials daily assert these are weapons directed solely at Germany and that although they purport to be defensive it is an easy matter to ar-

A Vision in the Night.

A soft floodlight from the ends of the open car throws the gun carriage and its burden into bright relief against the darkened cars ahead and behind, so it seems like a modern vision of a heavenly chariot passing through the dark night.

Yet it is an open question whether these many miles of the spectacle of the nation's grief tonight is more impressive than today's last scenes in Warsaw, when the Polish Army took leave of its creator and beloved chief. The army went to the cathedral at 10 o'clock this morning to carry him away. It went 15,000 strong—and every regiment was represented—with a naval detachment led by the Polish admiral and an air-force detachment under its general.

Every infantry division sent three platoons, one from each regiment, with the regiment's colonel and colors and the general commanding the division. Each cavalry division sent three troops with their colonels, their colors and the division general. Each artillery division sent three guns, its chief officers and the battery colors. They marched by divisions, the general, afoot, leading, with his three regimental commanders abreast and the regimental colors following, and behind them the chosen detachments of the rank and file.

Marching slowly, this army was almost an hour in passing. At its end came a special detachment of the Marshal's own cavalry regiment. Then came officers carrying a hundred or more huge wreaths of laurel and palm or flowers in the national colors and the Marshal's own decorations, with the Polish Independence Cross first. Next came long lines of priests and nuns, 500 of each, closing with the army's field Bishop and its chaplain. They preceded the gun-carriage that bore
the Marshal's coffin.

Behind it walked his family, General Rydz-Smigly, Inspector General, escorting Mme. Alexandra Pilsudski, and General Sosnowski, escorting her elder daughter. Behind the family walked the Polish President, Ignaz Moscicki, and his guests, the official mourners of other nations, these six abreast.

There were three marshals, the Earl of Cavan, Pétain of France and Prejunu of Rumania; General Hermann Wilhelm Goering, representing Germany; Pierre Laval, Foreign Minister of France; William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to Moscow, and Foreign Minister A. V. Hackzell of Finland.

After these and many other special envoys came the Polish Premier, Walery Slawek, and other members of the Cabinet, parliamentary Deputies and, last, political delegations, including, it was noted, all the leaders of the two Opposition groups, the Socialist and Peasant parties.

This part of the funeral procession was not so large as that on Wednesday night. But in the main this was the army's own tribute, and it was more impressive in the daytime than in the darkened coffin on the grass-covered bank.

raised again, swords came to a salute but the passing feet upon the green turf made no sound. An occasional rattle sob from the great throne around seemed as loud as if it were in church at prayer time.

Finally the last troop passed. The army general in command faced about and brought his hand to a salute in a last report to that recumbent figure under the national colors. Then for the first time in all this week a band was heard.
Softly it played the Polish national anthem and then, "We, the First Brigade," the hymn of the Marshal's legionnaires.

Officers rolled the gun carriage back upon the car that was to carry it away, secured it there, and heaped wreaths around it. The battery began to thunder the last salute of honor, 100 guns. And amid that sound the special train passed from sight.

great national sorrow. Together with the whole Polish people, I am much touched by them."

President Smetona, a far-sighted statesman, may commit the sen-nia's prestige. Indeed, it is felt that a generous gesture embracing all or most of the prisoners would regain for Lithuania much of the recently lost sympathy of friendly

outside observers.

If such a gesture is withheld,
there is little prospect of relieving the tension on the German-Lithuanian frontier and in Memel or of a stable peace in Eastern Europe.

Plan Appeal to President.

KAUNAS, Lithuania, May 17 (AP).—
Only the possibility of presidential clemency stood tonight between four Nazis accused of plotting to return the Memel territory to Germany and death before a firing squad.

The Lithuanian Supreme Court
upheld today the sentences of death and of imprisonment to eighty-seven other German residents of Memel, sentences which created flaming resentment in Germany.

Although the doomed men indicated they did not wish an appeal,
their attorneys made hasty preparations to carry the matter to President Antanas Smetona. If he fails to act, they will go before a firing squad within twenty-four hours.

The condemned men are Emil Boll, Walter Preiss, Heinrich Wan-nagat and Emil Lepa. They were convicted of killing an alleged fellow conspirator, George Jesuitis, who is said to have confessed to Lithuanian authorities that he had negotiated in Berlin with Nazi officials. His body was thrown into the River Jura.

The defendants were convicted in March. Thirty-five other Nazis were acquitted. One received a life term, and the other prison sentences ranged from one to twelve years. The property of most of the defendants was confiscated.

Border City Heavily Guarded.

TILSIT, East Prussia, May 17
(AP).—This German city on the Lithuanian border was heavily guarded tonight because of excitement over the action of the Lithuanian Supreme Court in upholding death sentences for four German residents of Memel.

Luisenbruecke, which is the only
passage into the Memel territory,
was guarded by Lithuanian soldiers with rifles and machine guns.
Nazi border patrols stood watch on the German side. Crowds jammed the streets in front of newspaper buildings to seize extra editions containing the verdict.

Tension prevailed at the Tilsit garrison, which recently was filled with soldiers. The border between Germany and Lithuania has been closed here for several days.

STOCKHOLM IS COOL
TO VISIT OF HESS
German Reports That Talk Was Huge Success Evoke Both Surprise and Amusement.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
STOCKHOLM, May 17. (London Times dispatch)—A German press description of the visit to Sweden of Rudolf Hess, Reichsmarshal Adolf Hitler's deputy, as leader of the Nazi party, and an outstanding success has been received here with surprise tinged with amusement. His lecture attracted an unusually large audience, but subsequent newspaper reports were very meager. Even the Stockholm newspaper most closely identified with the German cause printed only the short summary sent out by the official news agency.

That the Nazis attached great importance to the propaganda value of the visit may be judged from the fact that the visit of Herr Hess's lecture was photographed from Berlin to the leading news agencies abroad some time before he had begun to speak in Stockholm. From the propaganda viewpoint, however, the visit can only be described as a failure. In a leading article yesterday the newspaper Social Democrat, official organ of the Government party, dismissed it in these terms:

"Herr Hess could freely describe German comrades to the Swedish Government party as a gang of unscrupulous elements who, together with the rest of German democracy, were chiefly responsible for the defeat of the German armies, the Treaty of Versailles, the disarmament of Germany, and so forth. He could do this because Sweden, unlike Germany, is a free country."

No one imagines for one moment that it would be possible for a Socialist Cabinet Minister from one of the Scandinavian States to get up in Berlin and solemnly describe supporters of the Nazi regime as unscrupulous individuals who if they got their way would lead their people to destruction.

It is kind of Herr Hess to vouchsafe the soothing explanation that Germany does not want war but true peace. "What is a true peace?" It cannot be anything else but a peace under which Germany, backed by monstrous armaments, extorts concessions from others who yield rather than set Europe aflame. Even Britain, with all her patience, seems to be realizing this."

U. S. PLANS IN NICARAGUA.

Good-Will Squadron Feted—Returns to Panama Today.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.
MANAGUA, Nicaragua, May 17.—Seven United States Army planes, commanded by Lieut. Col. Lewis H. Brereton, arrived today from San Salvador after making a good will flight over Central America. Officers and men were received by President Juan Sacasa and other high officials. The United States Minister, Arthur Bliss Lane, gave a reception in honor of the fliers. The squadron will return to Panama tomorrow.

Many Orders in Rhineland.

Most of the consulates and offices involved are located in the Rhineland and Westphalia, although house searches and arrests have also been made in Baden, Silesia and elsewhere. All the hearings will be held in Berlin.

Numerous members of the Carmelite order have been caught in the government's dragnet and their prosecution promises to attain sensational dimensions unless attempts are undertaken to halt the proceedings through influential intervention.

The latter, it was learned, would not be forthcoming from official Catholic sources, however, despite the sorrow caused by the matter throughout the German Catholic world.

The prosecution of all the indictments, it was emphasized in other quarters, would be wholly conducted with regard for legal and penal considerations and it was inferred that the government did not intend to deal with them from the political angle.

ANOTHER AMERICAN
ARRESTED IN MUNICH

Information Refused to Consul
on Jailing of C. Nisselbeck, Naturalized in 1931.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MUNICH, May 17.—Another American citizen was taken off to prison here today by the secret political police. He is Charles Nisselbeck, 35 years old, who was born in Germany but naturalized in 1931 in New York City and who has been carrying on an import and export business here for about a year.

As on previous occasions, the secret police were unable to give any information to the United States Consul, who spent the day trying to break through the wall of silence surrounding the arrest. The consulate was only able to learn from other sources that after Mr. Nisselbeck had been taken into custody his apartment was thoroughly searched.

The charge against the American is scarcely likely to be Communist propaganda—the most usual one in such cases—since he was a member of the strongly anti-Communist Stahlhelm veterans' league before he went to the United States.

The last American to fall into the hands of the Munich secret police, Richard Roiderer, spent some ten months in jail before he was finally freed after trial before the People's Tribunal in Berlin this Spring on a charge of treason.

NEW ROBOT PILOT TEST.

Royal Dutch Air Transport to Attempt Long Automatic Flight.

Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 17.—The Royal Dutch Air Line is taking a new step forward in European aviation. After its big success with an American plane in the London-Melbourne air race it bought fourteen American DC2 machines for the East Indian routes.

The first machine, with an automatic pilot, will start from Amsterdam for Copenhagen Saturday, when, for the first time in the history of European air traffic on a normal route, a flight with the automatic pilot guiding the machine the entire distance will be attempted.

Deutsche Arbeiter-Zeitung (German) whistled, "Mockery about Adolf Hitler," General Hermann Wilhelm Goebbels said yesterday. He said that the Nazis who in the whispered jazz language is dubbed "Wotan's Wacky Music" is the last but clearly effective weapon of opposition which the Nazis otherwise have bludgeoned into silence. But they always catch a faint echo of whispered sarcasm and chuckles from somewhere just beyond their reach, and they feel uneasy.

Thus when the Graphia Company collected about 400 of these whispered laughs and published them about two months ago the great Nazi machine got working in earnest. Its efforts at last have been crowned with success, and the entertaining little volume has been suppressed.

But this success did not come before the volume had set most of Europe laughing, not excepting Germany, whose chuckles over thousands of smuggled copies were nonetheless genuine through being muffled by discreet handkerchiefs.
